Introduction

The New Jersey Juvenile Justice Commission (JJJ) understands that gangs and gang related activities impact every community in our State. The JJC works with schools, community organizations and other law enforcement agencies to combat juvenile street gangs and help young people succeed.

The JJC has responded with a comprehensive program that addresses youth gangs at all levels. With funding from the NJ Department of Education, the JJC has developed a cutting-edge education curriculum, entitled Phoenix, that corresponds with the NJ Core Curriculum Standards.

This course can be tailored for youth in secure and residential programs, as well as county-operated detention centers and community-based programs. The workbook-based lessons provide structure and support, and clearly identify the progress of participants. The most important goal of the curriculum is developing self-efficacy skills, thereby allowing juveniles to understand how to react to risky situations, and to think through their actions and responses to avoid future gang involvement.

To expand its reach, the JJC is forming partnerships with communities to train others in the Phoenix curriculum. The JJC is also coordinating with the county offices of probation, as well as the police departments, to build a “safety net” of resources for youth in the community.

Experienced JJC staff are available to conduct workshops. One-day training sessions can be adapted to meet an audience’s specific needs and information level. It can also be expanded to provide more in depth training.

Gang members communicate in many different ways. Speech is the most obvious; however, gang members also make use of nonverbal methods of exchanging thoughts. Graffiti, hand signs, colors, and tattoos are indicators of gang affiliation.

Gang members have their own language, which contains phrases, hand signs, tattoos, markings and graffiti. These often overlap. As a parent, you may not recognize them right away. The items listed as Identifiers in this booklet include types of clothing young people might wear, tattoos and other markings. The items listed as Phrases are expressions young people might say to each other or write on their school notebooks. As a parent, you should familiarize yourself with them, so that you will be alert to them.

Street gangs are targeting young people at an earlier and earlier age. It is critical that you be able to recognize the signs of gang involvement. This booklet is designed to help parents, teachers, and community members spot gang activity in their families, schools and communities. The pages that follow provide you with vivid descriptions that you can use to identify gang activity. If you spot any of these signs, there are professionals available to help you.

There are approximately 2,300 gang members under the age of 15 in New Jersey. Children as young as second and third grade have known gang affiliations. In fact, 46 percent of gang-related incidents occur on school property.

Why do kids join gangs?

Each case is individual, but some reasons include:

- Security, protection and a sense of belonging
- Lack of family, community, or youth support system (too much unsupervised time)
- Sense of status or respect
- Living in a gang infested community or having family members in a gang
- Low self-esteem
- Financial opportunities (i.e. profits from drug distribution and other illegal activities)
- Peer pressure
- Thrill seeking
- Media glorifying violence

Recognize the Signs

bloods

Originally from Los Angeles, the Bloods are one of the largest associations of street gangs in the United States. These extremely violent and aggressive street gangs, referred to as sets, have adopted a common gang philosophy. Members use violence to protect and expand their drug distribution. The sets share a comprehensive philosophy, expressed in an oath, a prayer, a song, a motto, a concept of war, and 31 common rules including an Initiation, where a new member must withstand 31 seconds of beating or sexual relations.
